

I am opposed to any FCC action to implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. I have two telephone lines. One is listed as a do not call number on the Indiana Attorney General's list. The unlisted line receives nearly 5 unsolicited telephone marketing calls per day, many of which are computer generated calls. As I have a home office, these calls require me to drop what I am working on to answer the call, costing me nearly one half hour of wasted time per day. This will hopefully change when that phone number is listed at the first of the year on Indiana' list. I sincerely hope the FCC does nothing to regulate the state action that allows consumers to opt out of telephone harrassment by telemarketers while we are in our homes. It isn't like we are in a public area and the telemarketers are using protected speech. Thanks for yoiur attention.
